

Marla Ucelli-Kashyap is Senior Director for Educational Issues at the 1.8 million-member American Federation of Teachers, where she serves as strategic advisor to AFT President Randi Weingarten and leads a 30-person team working on key areas of policy, practice, technical assistance, and professional development aimed at helping teachers and their unions improve education quality and their profession. The Educational Issues portfolio includes the teacher career continuum and workforce shortages, community schools expansion, evidence-based reading instruction, the AFT's signature professional conferences and training programs, and its Share My Lesson resource sharing website with more than 2 million registered users.

Prior to AFT, Marla was Director of District Redesign and Leadership at the Annenberg Institute for School Reform at Brown University. Before that, she was a senior program officer at the Rockefeller Foundation. Early in her career, Marla served as senior education aide to New Jersey Governor Thomas H. Kean and as special assistant to then President of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, Ernest L. Boyer.

Marla has also been an education policy consultant, a press secretary, and a reporter. She holds degrees from New York University and Rutgers. Marla has served on numerous boards and advisory groups, including multiple terms leading the boards of the Learning First Alliance and Editorial Projects in Education. She was a member of the Education Agency Review Team for the Biden Administration transition.
